

North American Representative to WORLD MARKET UPDATE published by:

the premier forecaster for the international wind industry

August 2008

Dear Wind Energy Professional,

BTM CONSULT – the premier forecaster for the international wind industry – to release their second Supply Chain Assessment, analyzing the key material and main component supply situation over the next five years in one of the world’s fastest growing industries.

BTM Consult
“ SUPPLY CHAIN ASSESSMENT 2008-2012”
AUGUST 2008

SINDAL MARKET ANALYST, the North American representative for BTM Consult, is now accepting orders for this important new report.

At this time, the manufacturers of main components are stretching their limits to increase their production capacities in several places around the world. Is it enough to balance the increasing demand for wind turbines throughout the world, and when can the industry expect that balance to occur?

BTM’s analysis looks at the present and future megawatt capacity of about 200 of the industry’s leading suppliers of casting, forged steel, blades, gearboxes, generators, converters and other components. The suppliers are located in Europe, North America and Asia. Approximately 75 pages long, the study contains more than 40 tables and graphs to help illustrate supply constraints in the wind turbine manufacturing sector.
